Students find advising needs help

By Amylo L. Brown
STAFF WRITER

Academic advising is not one of the University's strongest points, according to an August survey recently released by the office of institutional research.

The survey, which questioned graduating seniors, dealt with the students' satisfaction with the University and its services. Advising was rated the lowest, with 58 percent of the respondents "satisfied" or "very satisfied" with the overall quality of their advising experiences.

President Sidney Ribeau, in his Opening Day Address, noted that advising was consistently appearing on student surveys as a problem area.

"Why advising is rated low, we really don't know," said John Folkins, interim vice provost for academic affairs. "We really want to do better."

The problem may lie in the training of faculty advisers, which differs from college to college. Faculty advisers are not full-time advisers; they are professors who advise in addition to teaching and doing research.

While each college does have a staff of professional advisers with counseling backgrounds, faculty advisers are the ones students see most often after declaring a major.

In order to help colleges and departments better train their faculty advisers, an advising network is being put in place by the office of academic enhancement.

"The purpose of the network is not to generate another study," said Alberto Gonzalez, interim vice provost for academic services. "It would provide and develop activities for advisers. It would provide information to the students."

The network would help advising programs bring in speakers, materials or anything else the programs might request.

"If they said we need x, y and z in order to do better advising, we'd try to respond," Gonzalez said.

Although the structure is not formed yet, students and faculty will make up the network committee and discuss advising issues and solutions to the problems.

"I think the main thing is (for advisers) to know exactly what the requirements are," said Leland Miller, graduate adviser for the computer science department.

While Miller, as a graduate adviser, only needs to know which courses computer science majors need for their

Speech to cause protest

THE BG NEWS

The College Republicans are staging a protest Tuesday night to voice their discontent with the political views of a speaker sponsored by the journalism department.

Molly Ivins, a Currier Lecture Series featured speaker, is a syndicated columnist who writes about political topics. She's also the author of "Shrub: The Short But Successful Political Life of George W. Bush."

A news release from College Republican chairwoman Susan Waidner said that the protest is intended to show "a strong Republican presence" at her speech. Waidner was not available for comment.

According to Matt Olwine, "The journalism department is not representing true journalism and fair-mindedness by bringing a speaker so slanted in her views." He said he considered Ivins "an extreme left-wing activist." Olwine was formerly second vice chairman of BGSU's College Republicans but resigned because of time constraints, he said.

Jennifer Imes, chairwoman of public relations for the club, said the action was to be a silent protest. "We'd like to make our presence known here. We want to let students know we do not partake only in campaigns but on the campus itself," she said.

Imes clarified that the group is not protesting Ivins as a journalist, but rather are challenging her "ideals and ideas."

Ivins is scheduled to speak at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in 101A Olscamp. She is described as a "syndicated columnist with a political edge," and is published in newspapers across the country, from Fort Worth, Texas, to Fort Wayne, Ind.

Other speakers whom the journalism department has sponsored as part of the Currier Lecture series include Michael Moore, author and filmmaker.

5 bodies point to Bulger's gang

By Lisa Lipman
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

BOSTON — Across the Boston area, investigators have been digging up bodies along with the long-buried secrets of fugitive mob boss James "Whitey" Bulger and his associates.

The dead — five of them so far — are believed to be victims of Bulger's gang from as far back as the 1970s.

Their discovery comes after more than five years of work by investigators and federal court hearings that revealed a cozy relationship between Bulger and the FBI.

The reputed boss of Boston's Irish mob has been on the lam since 1995 after an FBI agent allegedly tipped him off about an indictment. He is now on the agency's 10 Most Wanted list.

"If Bulger's going to be apprehended, it will be because of these bodies," said Jack Levin, a professor of sociology and criminology at Northeastern University. "Now there's hard evidence of mass murder."

"And mass murder of not only

New coin not used for spending

By Kimberly Dupps
CITY EDITOR

The face of a Shoshone interpreter shines on the newest coin minted by the U.S. Treasury.

Sacagawea, famous for helping Lewis and Clark explore the Louisiana Territory between 1804 and 1806, is on the new Golden Dollar.

The Golden Dollar was issued in January 2000 to replace the Susan B. Anthony dollar. The supply of SBAs was dwindling and there was a need for a dollar coin in commerce, according to the U.S. mint.

However, few people are using the new dollar coins as spending money.

"People are trying to collect them, rather than spend them," Mark Adams, Huntington Bank manager, said.

June Gates, bank booksperson for the fourth district Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, said that people want the coins.

"Initially, there was a strong demand for the coins. We had trouble filling orders from banks for them," Gates said.

Howard Cook, president and owner of Hcc, Inc.-rare coins, said that people like to collect coins in general and this can be seen in the usage trends of the Golden Dollar.

Although people are collecting the Golden Dollar in the hopes that it will be valuable, the coin may never be an item of value. According to Cook, an item's value is dependent on three things: Age, quality and the total number of coins minted.

The U.S. mint has already produced too many of the coins for them to be valuable in the future.

Gates said that the Treasury projected to mint 1.2 billion Golden Dollars this year alone.

Despite the large number of Golden Dollars minted, many have never used them.

"I've seen the new Golden Dollars," Valerie Weldon, junior classic civilizations major, said. "I have never used one, though."

Tiffany Stuewe, sophomore graphic design major, worked at a Hollywood Video store over the summer. Although a few customers did use the coins to pay for their video rentals, many people did not like the coins.

"When you gave them (the Golden Dollars) to people as change, they didn't want them. People wanted bills," Stuewe said.

Cook feels that if the banks were to give them out as change, rather than upon request, the coins may go into circulation more rapidly.

However, Stuewe feels that many people will forget about the Golden Dollars because they can be mistaken for ordinary coins.

"Men have wallets and usually keep their change separate. The coins are going to be thrown in a change jar and forgotten about," Stuewe said.

Cook also feels that they are going to be used as often as the U.S. Mint anticipated.

"The only way for them (the Golden Dollars) to get used is to get rid of the dollar bill," Cook said.

Although the demand was high, it has dropped off recently, according to Gates. The fourth district Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland has plenty of the Golden Dollars in stock.

degree, undergraduate faculty advisers have to keep track of requirements for every degree offered in their department.

"Ideally, students would be able to know right away what requirements they need and have met," said Lou Kreuger, an undergraduate adviser in the school of art, referring to a computerized system that would inform students of their credit status.

"That would enable faculty and students to talk about the classes and what students really want to achieve. We spend so much time evaluating transcripts," he said, "the really significant issues—course choice, transitioning out of college into the professional world—don't get addressed as much as they should."

Some colleges have already responded to claims of poor advising and are improving their programs.

"We just added a fourth professional adviser," said Rich Hebein, associate dean for student affairs in the college of Arts and Sciences. "We have about a dozen workshops set up this semester." Advisers are not required to go to the workshops, however.

Hebein also said a student advisory committee will soon be meeting with the dean.

The College of Technology is making sure all advisers are up to speed on technology they can use to access information for students, according to dean Ernest Savage.

An ad hoc committee on advising is being formed in the College of Education and Human Development.

"We are going to address any advising issues," said Kim Grillo, director of undergraduate student services for education and human development.

crime figures, but of ordinary people who may have had contact with crime figures but were not themselves involved in the underworld."

The first three bodies were found early this year, near an interstate in Boston's Dorchester section. One of them, Deborah Hussey, was said to have had an affair with Bulger associate Stephen "The Rifleman" Flemmi and was threatening to expose the relationship to her mother—Flemmi's common-law wife. Hussey disappeared in 1984.

Last week, investigators in Dorchester found skeletal remains believed to be those of Paul McGonagle, a rival of Bulger's who disappeared in

The latest body was unearthed Thursday in Quincy, just outside Boston and several hundred yards from where Bulger once lived. The victim is believed to be Tommy King, who disappeared in 1975 after a bar fight with Bulger.

According to published reports, authorities were led to the bodies by Kevin Weeks, a Bulger crony who pleaded guilty to federal racketeering charges.

The digging continued Friday, reportedly for Debbie Davis, a former girlfriend of Flemmi's who disappeared in 1981.

Davis' relatives have been going to each new grave in hopes of finding her.

"It's not just how this might help an ongoing investigation," U.S. Attorney Donald Stern said.

"It's also the emotional toll that it takes on family members whose loved ones have disappeared for all these years."

The unearthing of the bodies marks a new stage in the investigation into Bulger, brother of William Bulger, a former state Senate president who is now president of the University of Massachusetts.

Bulger and his cohorts are accused of bookmaking, extortion and other crimes dating to the early '70s. According to court records, Flemmi and Bulger also worked as FBI informants.

Flemmi, who is awaiting trial on racketeering charges, has claimed that with the FBI's protection, he and Bulger could do anything short of "clipping someone" without fear of arrest.

Over and over, Flemmi said, he asked then-FBI agent John Connolly and Connolly's supervisor to guarantee him immunity from prosecution, which he said they did.

Connolly now faces federal racketeering charges. He is accused of alerting Bulger and Flemmi to investigations by other law enforcement agencies and tipping them off in 1995 about an upcoming indictment.

Bulger remains on the lam.

"What typically happens in a murder case, is that the trail goes colder and colder with every passing year," Levin said. "The public loses interest in the case. Investigators move on to cases that are easier to resolve. But finding bodies always energizes an old murder case."

SNOW: Ed Vossler fires up his chainsaw Sunday Sept. 24, 2000, to cut apart a tree limb in a relative's lawn in Cheyenne, Wyo., that fell during a snow storm Sunday, just missing the home.

Record setting snow hits Cheyenne

By Mead Gruyer
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — A snow storm that blanketed much of Wyoming, shutting down highways and stranding travelers through the weekend, plowed through Colorado and into western Nebraska early Sunday and set a record for early snowfall in Cheyenne.

The capital city had recorded 10.5 inches of snow by Sunday morning, but warming temperatures through the afternoon were quickly melting the accumulation.

By evening, only a couple of inches of snow remained on the ground in Cheyenne, and green grass poked through the snow in yards across Denver.

The brunt of the storm had pulled down tree branches and caused power outages in Colorado on Saturday night, less than a week after Denver set a temperature record with its 61st day at 90 degrees or above.

In Cheyenne, the last comparable early snowfall hit Sept. 28, 1985, when a storm left 4.9 inches of snow across the city, according to the National Weather Service.

Through the Looking Glass

Make a fool of me, will you?!

A man in Khabarovsk, Russia, sought bloody vengeance when he found out that his wife was cheating on him. He went to the apartment where the two lovebirds were having their trysts to plant a home-made bomb. Alas, as he was attaching it to the door, it went off, killing him.

Honest officer, I was robbed:

Police say the 19-year-old night clerk at a Shawnee, Kan., convenience store bungled a robbery by covering the lenses of the security cameras with transparent tape. The cops say he stashed the money and then told them a cockamamie story that a robber called him and ordered him to tape the lenses, after which he came in and robbed the place. This account was not corroborated by the security tapes which "looked a little fuzzy," but were clear enough to show what went on, said police.

Hey, who is hunting whom?

A 46-year-old Missouri father and his 25-year-old son were hunting with bows and arrows in the wilds of Colorado when a large black bear lunged out of the underbrush and bit the son on the buttocks. Though the father was carrying a .44-caliber handgun, he was so rattled that, instead of shooting the burn-biting beast, he threw the gun at it. In response, the animal stopped attacking the son, but bit the father on the thigh, then fled.

Don't mess with armed customers

A power company in Ivanovo, Russia, cut off the power to a missile base for nonpayment of its electric bill. In response, the base commander sent in a contingent of heavily armed troops who seized the power station and restarted the electricity.

Incriminating evidence, Brad

When a film processor developed Brad Davis' snapshots of himself, he noticed that Davis was photographed in front of the marijuana plants he had been growing in his LaPorte, Ind., home. He informed police who confiscated more than three dozen marijuana plants, and arrested Davis, who has pleaded guilty to maintaining a common nuisance.

Twenty-one and grounded

HEATHER HEBAN
The Fashionista

I want to start off by saying that I hate my family.

Well, not really, but I hate living with them. They say you can always go back home.

I have tried. It sucks.

It all started last April when my mom decided she would talk me into moving back home for my last year of school. My first instinct was to humor her, resign my withholding lease and keep living a free life. Well, my mom is a pretty persistent little lady, and I am stuck in Rossford, Ohio (a.k.a. "Hell").

The plan was that I would move home, live rent- and grocery-free, work full-time and have the respect a 21-year-old overachiever deserves.

That was a big load of crap.

Come May I was sharing a room with a 13-year-old N'SYNC fanatic, signing up for car use and I had a curfew!

I thought things would get better as the summer moved on. I got to move back in my old room, curfew was lifted and I built up a tolerance (though not an acceptance) to Britney Spears and Christina Aguilera. Things still were not the best but, hey, I was trying.

Well, these last few weeks have brought forth a Hitler-esque way of life.

I am not exaggerating when I say that life right now, in comparison to what it was this time last year, makes me want to eat a poundcake in under a minute.

My friends and everything that has been familiar to me the last three years, are 15 miles down a road that I need a parental permit to travel. To better help one comprehend what it is like to be a commuter, (one with psycho parents, no less), I will throw out a couple of situations that might be entertaining.

First, my parents have decided that long distance is not good and that cell phones are far more economic. So, for me to have contact with anyone of value I need a phone card, which I pay for. That's fine. But have you ever tried to have a conversation on a cell phone?

My parents and siblings eat crap and I am on campus most of the day so I tend to buy all of my own meals and groceries. I am dealing with that.

My curfew has been altered, but I must call a couple of times and give the number of where I am at to keep my parents updated. That is really nerdy but I am living rent-free and I always try to be the good, eldest child. But nothing compares to this past weekend, I got grounded.

Yes, I was grounded.

You see, I work 40+ hours a week and I am on campus from 9:30 a.m. - 9:00 p.m. during the off days. As one can guess, I really don't have a lot of time to socialize.

Friday night I finally got to go out, and that night turned into a Saturday afternoon. To anyone that doesn't have to answer to 40-year-old parental units, that is a typical weekend in BG.

At least, for three years that was typical for me. Until I came rolling in on Saturday morning. The thunder came down from the gods (the freedom gods, that is). I no longer have use of the car other than for school and work. I am considered a ungrateful, disrespectful, lazy, good-for-nothing, useless, worthless moocher.

Last I heard, at least. All I have now is the "silent treatment."

Did I mention that I am 21 years old? And grounded?

I guess that I feel a lot better because I just shared all of my anger and frustration with a entire college campus. Or so my therapist, the Page 3 Guy, tells me.

And hopefully, I have reached out and connected with at least one commuting student. Roommates aren't always easy to live with, and commuting is not fun at all. But when your roommates are the ones you share DNA with, and the commute to campus causes you to be placed in a semi-truck sandwich, you really start to look at life in a different light.

In any light, however, I still refuse to accept "Bye Bye Bye."

RIDERS TRAPPED ON ROLLER COASTER

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) -- Two dozen passengers on a roller coaster were trapped 30 feet in the air for two hours after a guest's jacket jammed between a car and its track, the second accident in two days at a Southern California amusement park. None of the 25 passengers aboard the Jaguar! at Knott's Berry Farm was hurt.

Advising needs improvement

Advising is a problem at the University. A survey by the Office of Institutional Research gives solid numbers to this fact, which has long been known by students trying to graduate.

The survey ranked advising as having the lowest satisfaction rate of any University service. Only 58 percent of respondents said they were satisfied with the quality of advising they had received.

Poor advising is not a minor problem, it can cost students a lot of money. When students are required to take extreme class loads, summer classes or even extra years, it can cost them thousands of dollars and years of their lives. A response of, "Oops, we'll try to do better," is little consolation for students who will have to pay an extra year of tuition to graduate.

A possible solution would be to post academic requirements and a junior audit form on the University's website. This would give students more control over their academic careers. Although it wouldn't be a replacement for incompetent advisers, it could serve as an emergency backup for students who suspect their advisers are harming their

YOU DECIDE

What should the University do to improve academic advising? Let us know what you think at bgnews@listproc.bgsu.edu chances of graduating on time.

However, due to the irregularity of the University's updating, this solution might not work. Mix that with possible software conflicts (like the library's service that allows students to view their circulation record online, though only with Netscape), or the occasional student's aversion to computers, and the weaknesses begin to show.

Another problem is that there are no universal standards for advisers in each college. Faculty advisers are generally people who have been trained as scholars, not as advisers, and they are not forced to learn how to advise well. Instruction differs greatly from what an advisor must do. If faculty are going to be used, perhaps guidelines or classes can be used to educate them.

With: proper organization, rules and regulations, this problem will continue to persist. The University needs to find a way to make sure the advisers are properly trained so these problems don't continue.

Furthermore, students should not have to wait around for extra semesters because the University screwed up with scheduling their classes. It is a mark upon a university if a student can work diligently, yet be forced to take an extra semester through fault of their own. If the University is not going to solve this problem, they need to at least take responsibility for their own mistakes and let students graduate on time.

The advising at this University is poor and the students are tired of dealing with it. Students need to be able to walk into their adviser's office and trust that they are going to leave with exactly what they need to graduate. How are students supposed to be expected to go to their adviser, as they are required to, if they know their advisers are going to mess it up?

The University must solve this problem or the students are going to start advising themselves.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Do any gentlemen go to bars or clubs?

Why is it that behaviors that are unacceptable during the daytime become okay as soon as the sun goes down? Have you ever seen a guy grab a strange girl's posterior in the middle of a lecture class? Me neither. Now, have you ever seen a guy do the same thing in a night club or bar? Of course you have. Hell, I've experienced it. What I want to know is, why do all the sexual harassment laws go right out the window when you go to a club?

I realize that most of the time when a guy grabs a girl in the club, it's his twisted way of getting her attention. Where guys get the idea that this is okay, I'll never know. Maybe in the past they've met girls who are okay with being fondled in public by a complete stranger. Perhaps I'm just a prude in denial, but when a stranger grabs me anywhere, especially my posterior, I get a little upset. All my friends must also be prudes, because they feel the same way.

Whatever happened to asking a girl to dance? Did that concept go out with bobby socks and the do-wop? In all the times I've been clubbing, I can count the number of times I was actually asked to dance on ONE hand. And let me tell you something — those few guys were more likely to get my phone number than the dozen other guys who "propositioned" me in other ways.

In closing, I would like to remind all you "gentlemen" out there that most girls do NOT like to have their asses grabbed at clubs. You're much more likely to find a dance partner (or a partner for other "activities") simply by asking her to dance.

Part of humor column was plagiarized

I'd like to commend Page 3 columnist E. Sean Medina for his Sept. 21 piece "History 101: The New Deal." Not only did Medina manage to successfully waste three minutes of my life with his pointless drivel, but he also masterfully plagiarized Maxim Magazine's "50 Reasons We're Proud To Be American." (July 2000) Five of Medina's "ten historical reasons why America is the best country" are straight out of the Maxim article. Some are taken word for word: "We go to war for the nookie," jumps to mind.

I'm sure that you're all very proud of E. Sean Medina and would like to give him some sort of award for original uncredited research. One brief mention of a source gets you off the hook. I hope you don't get sued.

University a profit-driven business

Yesterday I read the most frustrating letter to the editor. I have read some letters that I have not agreed with, but "Free cable doesn't work very well" was wrong. The complaint the author voiced was legitimate, but I think it is time to lay one common misconception to rest.

Students at Bowling Green State University apparently think that the University is a charity — that benefiting students is the reason the University was created. It was not.

There are professors, teacher's assistants and other faculty who do care about students, but the University is a business and, like any other business, was created to make money for somebody.

The Kreischer Sundial recently added waffle irons. These seemingly innocent Irons of Death are great, if you want to pay the price. This morning I was pleased to see that the school had found another way to rip off its students. Somebody (a Sundial employee, I would assume) had posted a new sign by the waffle bar. The price of syrup is now included in the waffle's price.

I am curious about this. Is

GAILLIN CONLEY

Guest columnist

there a magic number that the syrup is worth or was the already-too-expensive price per ounce raised? If the former is true are people who choose not to eat syrup being charged for NOT eating it? And if the latter is true, why must those who opt to eat fruit instead of syrup be charged for both?

Also, while I'm on the topic, why are we forced to have a meal plan? I can go to Meijer and purchase a week or more worth of food for the price of three days' food at the Sundial. Why must I eat a "minimum"? And the University gets to keep the money left over — which there likely will not be due to the outrageous prices.

Graduate assistants are expected to teach classes, keep office hours and maintain their own course load. What is their compensation? Tuition, room and board, an equivalent of about $10,000 a year. BG graduate assistants could work at Wendy's and make more than that.

The University screws the residents who are forced to buy meal plans and screws the graduate students. Do you really think that it would give you free cable?

How many people do you know who had cable last year? Did you have cable last year? How much did you miss it? Would you have gotten it this year? Not me. Most students did not think cable was worth $200 a year — most still do not think that. So why are we paying for cable we don't want? Because the University forces us to. Because it is part of the room fee and we do not set our own rates.

Of course the University gets something from the sale of cable to every resident, whether it overcharges us or the cable company does and then rewards the University for its job well done. The money the university receives from this scam is more than enough to pay for the "free" movie channel. At any rate, the cable's not free.

America needs a revolution

AT ISSUE How can we reduce voter apathy?

I'm tired of waiting for the revolution

Ever since I was old enough to argue with my dad, I watched the elections with a strange fascination. Ever since I was old enough to understand the election statistics, I have watched the American populace with a strange revulsion.

The reason for my distaste is the growing number of citizens who just don't find time to vote. The part that alarms me is that most of the non-voters are my age. What is even more disturbing is that if it weren't for MTV, these people probably wouldn't know who was president.

In that light, I have come to agree with Old Man Jefferson. An occasional revolution is a very necessary thing.

There are other reasons, as well. The apathetic masses are justified in their belief that government is corrupt. For the most part, it always has been. Many of the people running for election don't want to help their constituents. They want the power.

But there are the Mr. Smiths who go to Washington, sent by those who marked up the ballot for their Congressional representatives. Trust me, if you actually do a little research, there are qualified candidates.

But it isn't just the voting. More and more young adults don't even listen to the basic news. "I hate politics" is their rallying cry, a cry that echoes through the classroom or living room filled with half-awake people.

What they fail to realize is that they engage in politics every day. The way you interact with people, get them to do you a favor, schedule meetings, join societies, what have you. Those are politics on a smaller scale. An election bears a marked similarity, except that instead of affecting a handful of people, the lives of 250 million Americans will be marked by it.

But the young voters aren't lazy, even if they are prone to apathy. UCLA found that 75 percent of incoming freshmen had engaged in voluntary community service. A majority of this campus can claim that they belong to an organization, many of which have service requirements.

So we're active. Despite my belief otherwise, most of us also have something that we care about. Almost down to the person, we each have some cause that we'd further at the expense of our time and sanity.

When it comes to the causes that help the nation, however, our old friend apathy returns.

This style of thought has been labeled "Identity Politics," where everybody's causes are narrow and personal. When and if our cause becomes fulfilled, we are sated. If it doesn't deal with our specific concern, we don't care and we don't research and we don't form an opinion.

Ladies and gentlemen, this cannot be. Specialization is for insects.

Two things are needed. First, we as citizens need to be well-read and well-rounded. While the individual is more important than the state (in my opinion), the state still needs to be considered.

On its part, the government also needs a change, a change created by us. Personally, I'm fed up with the Republican Party (or is that Demolican?). The alleged two-party system provides us with stability, but stability has lapsed into stagnancy.

A national revolution may be necessary, but it will only be the beginning. Nothing can be changed with a quick fix, and it will be up to us to keep our government from falling into disarray.

Because, honestly, sitting back and watching our descent into mediocrity making me apathetic.

Clinton's oil decision draws fire

By William C. Mann
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's decision to tap the nation's emergency oil reserves drew fire Sunday from the GOP vice presidential nominee as a political move to aid Democrat Al Gore.

The action amounted to nothing more than "tweaking prices six weeks before the election," Dick Cheney said, noting that the vice president proposed the draw-down just before the Clinton administration's announcement Friday.

But Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said the president was motivated by the potential heating oil shortages this winter — not high prices and the political problem they might cause Gore's White House bid.

On "Fox News Sunday," Cheney said he doubts whether the nation's hard-pressed refineries could quickly convert into heating oil the 30 million barrels Clinton ordered released in the next month.

"If your refineries are already operating at 96-97 percent of capacity, even if you give them more crude, they're not likely to be able to produce a significant increase in heating oil," he said.

Yet, "because it's six weeks before the election and they're worried about prices, all of a sudden Al Gore is for releasing oil ... to manipulate prices," Cheney said.

"It's hard not to view it in a political context."

Richardson, on NBC's "Meet the Press," denied again, as Clinton did Saturday, that the release was a political favor for Gore.

"We are preparing for potential disruptions, potential shortages," Richardson said. "The president acted because stocks were so low."

Shown videotapes in which Gore and Clinton suggested the release would bring prices in line, Richardson said: "All of this is consistent. We're concerned about tightness in the market."

He said the booming U.S. economy has increased demand for oil products by 14 percent. "But home heating oil stocks, extremely low," Richardson said. "We're worried about a winter ... where a lot of moderate-income people, poor people, couldn't pay for home heating oil."

The 590-million-barrel Strategic Oil Reserve was set up as insurance against interruption of oil supplies after the 1973 Arab oil embargo caused near-unprecedented shortages at the gasoline pump. Except for two practice drawdowns, its only previous use was during the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

Cheney, a former defense secretary who joined the oil technology company Halliburton after his Pentagon duty, appeared on three Sunday news shows to criticize Clinton's decision.

Battleground issues hotly debated

By Ron Fournier
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WEST MIDDLESEX, Pa. — Norman Clark hunches over a beer, watching foam dribble down the bottle and into a pile of quarters — six will buy his next serving. "You know why I wear this bracelet?" he asks a stranger caught eyeing the copper band.

"I wear it because I can't afford my pills."

Clark thinks the bracelet will ease arthritis in his wrist. He bought it after using all the free drug samples his doctor would give him, after the pharmacist charged $175 to fill his first prescription, after his wrist painfully swelled. "Who ... can afford that much for drugs?" said the retired steelworker, rubbing his sore joint.

In bars and diners, supermarkets and country stores, at malls and on Main Streets across three Great Lakes states, voters shared similar stories. It is clear from more than four dozen interviews last week that the issue has outpaced others in the campaign battlegrounds of Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

This could be good news for Democrat Al Gore, whose party holds the upper hand in polls on health care. Republican rival George W. Bush hopes to erase that edge.

"This is the deciding issue for me," said Richard Kelly, 49, of Detroit.

Bush and Gore are in a close, volatile race that both campaigns believe will be determined in this region and by voters who are not tied to either major party. Republicans plan to sharply reduce expenditures in Illinois, a sign that Gore may have wrapped the state up, but the race is competitive elsewhere in the Midwest. Swing voters are just starting to pay attention.

DRILLING FOR OIL: Venezuelan oil workers drill a new well in Motatan, Venezuela. Venezuela is currently preparing OPEC's second heads of state summit to be held Sept. 26-28.

Oil prices could test OPEC

By James Anderson
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

CARACAS, Venezuela — "Venezuela Promotes Global Harmony," trumpets the two-story banner draped in front of the Caracas theater where OPEC leaders are holding their first summit in 25 years this week.

President Clinton's efforts to push down oil prices drew clashing reactions from leaders of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, who find themselves under immense pressure to boost production.

"We are not going to allow ourselves to be pushed into (releasing) more oil than the market needs," OPEC Secretary General Rilwanu Lukman of Nigeria insisted Sunday. "The last time we did that, the prices went down to $10 a barrel ... and nobody was sorry for us."

Venezuela, which holds the rotating OPEC presidency, insists the cartel is unified — and that no production decisions will be made during the summit, which runs Tuesday through Thursday. That issue will come up at an OPEC meeting in Vienna in November, members say.

Some observers aren't so sure. OPEC President Ali Rodriguez conceded last week that cartel leaders could make some production decisions — only to reverse that stance. As for OPEC discipline, Rodriguez also has acknowledged reports that OPEC exceeded its quotas by up to 1 million barrels a day.

OPEC has boosted output this year by a total of 3.2 million barrels a day in a failed effort to cool prices. Supplies remain extremely tight, largely because of the strong U.S. economy and an economic rebound in Asia.

OPEC members point accusingly at consuming nations' high taxes on gasoline, diesel, heating oil and other products, as well as refining and shipping bottlenecks, as the culprits behind high prices.

Yet heading into the summit, some OPEC nations differed in their reactions to Clinton's decision to inject 1 million barrels of oil a day into the market for 30 days to push prices down.

Venezuela embraced the move, predicting it would provoke a sharp decline in oil prices this week. Lukman agreed, saying the move will "contribute to moderating the petroleum market."

Saudi Arabia, traditionally the closest U.S. ally among OPEC members, criticized Clinton's decision as "an election ploy requested by Al Gore." U.S. officials say the Saudis, the world's biggest oil producer, have since assured them they aren't too upset.

Iraq, with the world's second largest oil reserves, said Clinton's decision will only destabilize what it called "greedy markets."

One unifying point among OPEC members is their insistence that consumers look at the taxes they're paying.

"If the consuming countries want to lower prices for their consumers, the correct thing to do is not only to ask us to lower the prices of crude — which we are doing anyway — but also to moderate their taxes which are exuberantly high," Lukman said Sunday.

German family rescued after 9 days in Atlantic

By Ciaran Giles
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

MADRID, Spain — Four Germans, including a toddler, spent nine days adrift on a dinghy in the Atlantic with only rain water to drink before they were rescued and flown to a Spanish hospital, news reports said Sunday.

The four — a couple, their 2-year-old daughter and the captain of their yacht — set sail Sept. 13 from the northwestern Spanish port of A Coruna, bound for the Netherlands. But a day later, as they headed for the Bay of Biscay, an explosion and fire in the vessel's engine forced them to abandon ship.

Their yacht sank within minutes.

They spent the next nine days afloat with no food, surviving on rain collected in a plastic bucket.

Martina Hoffman told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Sunday from her room at Xeral hospital, in the northwestern port city of Vigo.

"My little girl Lisa is better now, she can talk and laugh and eat. She's a hardy girl," said Hoffman, 31.

"Now I feel well, but we were really afraid," Hoffman said. "Especially as the days went by and nobody picked us up."

Hoffman, who comes from the small town of Schettorf in northern Germany, said 11 boats passed but none apparently spotted them, although they fired four flares.

She said she spent most of the time hugging her little girl close, to keep her warm and alive.

"We were terribly cold and could only sit up and hold on," she said.

A Tunisian cargo vessel plucked them from the water Friday, about 70 miles from land. Once aboard the vessel, Hoffman said they were treated as if they were in a hotel and were given plenty of food, drink and clothes.

But the child's health was worrisome and on Saturday, the Tunisian ship radioed for help from Spain.

A helicopter was flown out and at one moment during the rescue operation, panic spread when the child stopped breathing and had to be resuscitated in the helicopter.

The two men — the child's father, Jorg Hoffman and his brother, Jan, the yacht's captain, were released from the hospital Saturday, but the mother and child were still recovering there Sunday.

VOTING: The French President Jacques Chirac and the first lady Bernadette cast their votes Sunday morning in the village of Sarran. French voters began casting ballots Sunday to decide whether to shorten the presidential term from seven to five years.

French shorten presidential term to 5 years

By Deborah Seward
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

PARIS — French voters easily approved a referendum Sunday on shortening the presidential term to five years, according to early projections, but dismal turnout was likely to deprive the country's leaders of any major political gain from the change aimed at modernizing French politics.

The constitutional change was approved by 73.5 percent, with 26.5 voting against, according to the SOFRES polling agency. A poll by the IPSOS polling organization showed similar results. Voter abstention was a record 68.74 percent, the Interior Ministry said.

The referendum failed to interest voters, and the abysmal turnout indicated that many French voters were more concerned about social, wage and educational issues than political reform.

Minutes after the polls closed, Prime Minister Lionel Jospin said he regretted the low turnout, adding that "I am happy for this reform that I called for" and saying he hoped for even more reforms.

President Jacques Chirac, who had opposed the constitutional change until recently, told his countrymen in an address on nationwide television after the polls closed that "Your democratic power is going to be reinforced."

However, many politicians, ranging from far right leader Jean-Marie Le Pen to the Communists to the Greens on the left, disparaged the referendum, while veteran conservative Charles Pasqua of the Rally for France party expressed concern.

"I am sad for democracy when you see such a lack of interest. It's worrying," said Pasqua, a Chirac rival who may run for president in the next elections in 2002.

The reform's proponents believe cutting the term from seven to five years will give French voters a chance to elect their head of state more often and lower the risk of "cohabitation," an often unwieldy situation that arises when the president and the prime minister come from opposing parties.

Polls leading up to Sunday's vote showed widespread apathy for the constitutional change, which easily could have been made by a vote of a joint session of both houses of the French parliament rather than a referendum.

The French president's term is the longest — along with Ireland — in Europe, and the reform was supposed to bring the term of France's most powerful office more in line with other major democracies.

IMF tackles oil prices

By Hans Greimel
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — Europeans tried to paint a picture of unified, enthusiastic support for their flagging currency Sunday, amid fears the United States was only halfheartedly behind last week's surprise intervention.

Addressing the other major threat to the current economic expansion — high oil prices — the International Monetary Fund asked producers and consumers to achieve stable prices at reasonable levels.

The sinking euro and rising oil top the agenda as the IMF and World Bank open their annual meetings here Tuesday, and all eyes will be on financial markets Monday to see if last week's efforts to prop up the euro and push oil lower will work.

A synchronized move Friday by the United States, Japan, the European Central Bank and other allies to buy the euro on foreign exchange markets immediately boosted the currency.

The euro surged from about 86 cents to 90 cents — but halved those gains by the end of Friday's trading — after U.S. Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers said America had a vital interest in a strong dollar.

The statement cast doubt on U.S. commitment to the intervention and perhaps future interventions, which essentially weaken the dollar to give a boost to the euro. The euro, the common currency used by 11 European Union nations, has recently plunged to record lows.

Before markets open Monday, European finance officials were busy putting their own spin on Summers' comments, saying the intervention had solid support from all members of the so-called Group of seven industrialized countries, including the United States.

Meanwhile, President Clinton said Friday he would tap into the U.S. emergency oil stockpile to push prices lower.

IMF officials introduced a new plan Sunday to stabilize the global oil market by bringing producers and consumers together, hailing it as a major breakthrough in the current crisis, which has seen oil prices surge to a 10-year high above $30 per barrel, triple the price of early 1999.

In the past, it has been difficult to get producers and consumers to agree on plans for the oil market, however, and the latest effort was still short on details.

Barak tries for partial agreement with Palestinians

By Jack Katzenell
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

JERUSALEM — Rolling back expectations of a final deal by next month, Prime Minister Ehud Barak said Sunday that he is prepared for a partial agreement with the Palestinians — a prospect the Palestinians said is out of the question.

Barak told the Israeli cabinet he does not rule out the possibility that "a comprehensive agreement will be achieved on most of the issues, while a time limit will be set for agreement on a very small part of them," his office said in a news release.

Palestinian parliament speaker Ahmed Qureia, also a senior peace negotiator, rejected the idea of another interim agreement. "There has to be agreement on every issue or there will be no agreement at all," he told reporters.

Until recently, Barak has said a full-fledged agreement would be the preferable outcome of intensive negotiations, and has given "50-50" chances to achieving a deal by next month.

In recent days, his Cabinet ministers have hinted they would accept a deal that delayed decisions on hot-button issues like Jerusalem. Barak's statement Sunday confirmed that approach.

The Camp David talks broke down over rival Palestinian and Israeli claims to east Jerusalem, in particular the Al-Aqsa mosque compound, the third holiest site in Islam and also the site of the Jewish temple, sacked in 70 A.D.

by the Romans.

Barak told the cabinet he would never hand sovereignty over the area to the Palestinians or any Muslim body.

Qureia said a solution of the Jerusalem issue cannot be postponed. "There will be no peace and no agreement without Jerusalem," he said.

The issues of borders and the future of the Palestinian refugees also remain unsolved, although considerable progress has been achieved in those areas.

Israel media reported that Barak hopes to meet with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat soon to bridge some of the gaps. Qureia said such a meeting would be welcome "as long as it is not for public relations."

Raiders too much for Browns, win 36-10

By Anne M. Peterson
AP SPORTS WRITER

OAKLAND, Calif. — Tyrone Wheatley and company made sure the Cleveland Browns' stay in first place was a brief one.

Wheatley ran for two touchdowns and William Thomas had two interceptions, including one he returned for a touchdown, as the Oakland Raiders beat the expansion Browns 36-10 on Sunday.

The Raiders (3-1) also got a 2-yard TD run from Zack Crockett and field goals of 37 and 31 yards from Sebastian Janikowski, the first-round draft pick who entered the game 2-for-5.

Rich Gannon, who had been criticized for favoring receiver Tim Brown, spread it around a little more this time, going 14-of-23 for 179 yards.

After passing for a career-high 316 yards last Sunday in Cleveland's 23-20 victory over the Steelers, Couch was 16-of-29 for 141 yards. He threw a 15-yard TD pass to Darrin Chiaverini on the opening drive for the Browns, who were tied for first in the AFC Central going into the game.

Cleveland (2-2) won just two games all of last season in their first year back in the league.

Phil Dawson hit a 29-yarder in the second quarter to account for the rest of Cleveland's scoring.

After Chiaverini's touchdown, Cleveland's attempt at an onside kick failed, putting Oakland on the Browns 43 for their first series.

Soon after, Wheatley scored on a 2-yard run for the Raiders, who bounced back after a 33-24 home loss to the Denver Broncos last Sunday.

Oakland took the lead on Wheatley's second 2-yard run to open the second quarter. The key play of the drive was Gannon's 48-yard pass to Andre Rison, who had three receptions for 54 yards.

Midway through the second quarter, the Browns got down to Oakland's 33-yard line on Erritt Rhett's 42-yard run. But Dawson's 42-yard field goal attempt went wide right.

Thomas, a 10-year veteran linebacker and two-time Pro Bowl player picked up by the Raiders in the offseason, snagged his first interception late in the second quarter. It led to Crockett's scoring run.

On the Browns' next possession with less than a minute left in the half, Thomas picked off Couch again, this time with a running scoop catch that he ran back 46 yards for a touchdown.

Top overall draft pick Courtney Brown, who sacked Kent Graham of the Steelers three times last Sunday, was quiet against the Raiders. In fact, Gannon remained untouched by the Browns' defenders all day.

Falcons drop 4th in row to Bulls

Running game gains 112 yards but Sahm and Schneider combine to throw for five completions on 19 attempts for 63 yards.

The Associated Press

AMHERST, N.Y. — A 27-yard run by Marquis Duarte with 1:27 left in the fourth quarter lifted the Buffalo Bulls to a 20-17 win over Bowling Green Saturday in the Mid-American Conference.

The win snapped an 18-game losing streak for Buffalo (1-3 overall, 1-0 MAC). Buffalo last won in a 47-0 victory over Division I-AA Canisius in 1998.

"There was a lot of joy and celebration in the locker room," Buffalo coach Craig Cirbus said. "It was time for our kids to win."

Buffalo, which recently returned to Division I-A, had not defeated a Division I-A foe since a 16-0 win over Holy Cross in 1970. Bowling Green, which entered the game as a 21-point favorite, fell to 0-4 overall and 0-1 in the MAC.

Duarte's TD capped a seven-play, 80-yard drive that consumed 2:04.

"Once I got around the corner, I turned it on and didn't stop until I reached the end zone."

MARQUIS DUARTE, BUFFALO

"Once I got around the corner, I turned it on and didn't stop until I reached the end zone," Duarte said of his first career TD.

Buffalo quarterback Joe Freedy was 24-of-38 for 183 yards and two touchdowns, but was also intercepted twice. Both interceptions led to Bowling Green touchdowns.

After Buffalo had taken a 7-0 lead after one quarter on a 2-yard pass from Freedy to Chad, John Gibson scored on a 2-yard run before Andy Sahm scored on a 1-yard quarterback sneak.

Buffalo cut the deficit to 14-13 later in the quarter on a 3-yard pass from Freedy to Andre Forde, but Scott Keller's extra-point attempt was wide left.

Mike Knapp connected on a 32-yard field goal with 13:22 left gave Bowling Green a 17-13 lead, but the Bulls rallied to end their victory drought.

The Bulls sacked Ricky Schneider twice on Bowling Green's position to seal the win.

BG loses to UA, BSU

READY TO PLAY: Two Falcons get ready to receive a Ball State serve Friday night. BG battled with BSU but lost in five sets; 15-12, 15-8, 10-15, 11-15 and 15-10.

All good things must come to an end, including the BG volleyball team's seven game win streak.

Defending MAC champion Ball State snapped the Falcons' streak in five sets on Friday night at Anderson Arena. The Cardinals won by scores of 15-12, 15-8, 10-15, 11-15 and 15-10.

BSU took control early with a 5-0 lead, but the Falcons came back to tie the match 6-6 with Nadia Bedricky's kill. BG took a one point lead but lost the serve and three more points to BSU. The Falcons twice came within one point, at 12-11 and 13-12, but the Cardinals took game one.

The Cardinals again took a commanding lead in game two, leading 10-1 before a seven-point Falcon rally. JoAnna Papageorgiou led the charge with two kills and two blocks. BSU cut the rally short and scored five more points to win game two.

Bedricky and Susie Norris combined for 18 kills to lead BGSU's offense in game three. The two freshmen led the Falcons to a 3-1 lead with Bedricky's back-to-back spikes. BSU tied the score at three, but kills by Norris and Papageorgiou gave the Falcons the lead. Norris iced the victory with her 12th kill of the game.

BG rallied with 12 points in the fourth game from an 8-1 deficit. Norris capped the surge for a 12-9 lead. Papageorgiou and Natalie Becker clinched the game with block assists.

In game five, BSU took a 3-0 lead before making it 8-2 f but dropped the game 10-15.

BG head coach Denise Van de Walle said that the Falcons played well in games three and four after losing the first two games. However, she thought that the Falcons could have played BSU closer in the fifth game.

"I'm really disappointed with the way we came out in game five," Van de Walle said. "The deficit should never have been that great. We shouldn't have been down four or five points right out of there."

Norris and Bedricky set personal bests for kills in the match with 24 and 20 respectively. Norris also recorded 23 digs for her first 20-20.

Papageorgiou finished with 15 kills, 18 digs and 10 blocks for the first triple-double of her Falcon career.

Another Bowling Green men's soccer match, another Bowling Green men's soccer loss.

In the last match of the BGSU Diadora Classic, Vanderbilt would go on to score two unanswered goals in eight minutes to give the Falcons their fourth, one goal loss on the season and a 2-5 record on the season.

The match opened up like most Falcon matches this season, with Vanderbilt controlling the tempo with their possession play. Soon after the first ten minutes of the match, the Falcons were in control.

In the 22nd minute off of a free kick situation Senior Falcon midfielder Gene Braxton half volleyed the ball out of the air and beat Vanderbilt goalkeeper Brad Winter. The only problem though was that the play was ruled offside so the score would end up 0-0 after 45.

The second half proved to be more of the same, the Falcons controlling possession. Finally after missed opportunities Fred Degand put the Falcons on top 1-0. With the ball set just outside of the Vanderbilt penalty area after a foul, Adam Erhard sent a high ball in to the area where Degand headed the ball, hit the post and rolled past the State: very slim. That is because BG hasn't beaten the defending Mid-American Conference Champions since 1992. But the Falcons did rally from two games down to take the Cardinals to a fifth game.

The odds of BG winning that fifth game: high. BG is 6-1 in five-game matches dating back to last year including a perfect 2-0 this season with wins over Cincinnati and Central Florida. Once again, the odds were not in the Falcons favor as Ball State jumped ahead early on their way to a 15-10 win.

"We usually pull out that fifth game," said freshman outside-hitter Nadia Bedricky. "I really had confidence we could do it. We just fell short."

Coming from behind is something that the Falcons have handled well this season, but middle-hitter co-captain Krista Davis believes the Brown and Orange will have to improve on.

"It's something we really need to work on," Davis said. "It seems like we're always playing catch up. We need to be the ones on top."

But the main theme of Saturday's match against Akron wasn't about coming from behind, it was about being on top. After losing the first game, BG came back to take a commanding 13-4 lead.

The odds of the Falcons winning the second game? According to BG coach Denise Van De Walle, it should have been without a doubt. But once again, the odds meant nothing.

"When we were up 13-4 and lost that second game, I think it gave Akron all the steam they needed to just roll through us," Van De Walle said. "We shouldn't have blown that kind of a lead."

The odds that BG would lose for the second consecutive night at home? Unfavorable. The Falcons hadn't lost back to back games at Anderson Arena since the beginning of October last year.

BG made another rally to win the third game, but inconsistent play did not give the team the momentum they needed to take the match to five games.

"We can play so much better than this, but we're just not right now," said freshman outside-hitter Susie Norris. "It's frustrating out there. We do really well sometimes, then we make it up with a bad play."

The Falcons start the MAC season at a disappointing 0-2, but there are still plenty of odds for BG to tackle. So what are the odds that Van De Walle's team can bounce back from their first two losses in the MAC?

"Two losses don't determine the season," Van De Walle said. "It just makes it tougher. With how competitive the MAC is, other teams will have two losses."

and sets (68). Bedricky, Caty Rommeck and Amber Vorst had four blocks apiece.

"We were very aggressive at the net," said Van de Walle of the Falcons' offensive effort. "I thought Susie Norris was unbelievable."

With the win, the Cardinals improve to 8-3 overall.

Saturday, the Falcons looked to return to their winning ways, but instead lost to the visiting Akron Zips. Akron won in four sets by 15-4, 17-15, 8-15 and 15-12.

In game one, the Zips took an 11-2 lead and never looked back. BG had a 12-3 lead in game two but Akron rallied for a 14-13 lead. The Falcons took a 15-14 advantage but the Zips won the game and a 2-0 lead in the match with three points.

However, BG rallied from a 4-0 deficit to win the third game. Laura Twyman's kill finished the Falcons' five-point streak. Akron took a 7-5 lead but Papageorgiou's kill ignited a second Falcon surge. BG scored eight unanswered points and hung on for the win.

The Falcons rallied from an 8-1 deficit in game four for a 12-10 lead. This time, however, their efforts fell short as Akron scored the last five points to take the match.

Van de Walle said that the Falcon offense took a long time to get aggressive.

"I think it's a lot to do with our hitting," Van de Walle said. "For some reason right now the setting is off and the hitting is off. We tried but we fell short."

Norris led the Falcons with 15 kills and 18 digs. Papageorgiou posted 13 kills and 14 digs for a double-double, along with five blocks.

"We're a good team and the fire wasn't there tonight," said Papageorgiou of the Falcons' effort. "We've got to correct that. Every MAC team is really good and we've got to decide that we're going to come out with that fire every single game."

Shyann Robinson recorded 10 kills and Caty Rommeck posted 16 digs in the loss.

Akron head coach Mike Sweitzer said that neither team played as well as it could have.

"I think both teams were a little flat," said Sweitzer of the match. "We just persevered this time."

With the win Akron moves to 6-7 overall and 1-1 in MAC play. The Falcons are now 7-4 overall with an 0-2 MAC record.

goal line. The goal was Degand's third of the season and ties him for the team lead in goals. Erhard leads the team in assists with four.

The Commodore's were not finished though. With about 30 minutes left in the match, Vanderbilt started controlling the play again. At the 65th minute, sophomore Commodore Chris Yingling sent a cross pass to the other side of the Falcon goal where Eric Kubacki headed the ball past Falcon freshman goalkeeper David DeGraff.

Vanderbilt would attack again in the 74th minute when Commodore goalkeeper Winter sent the ball deep into the Falcon half of the field off of an offside restart. Yingling would pick up the ball and send it to freshman striker Jimmy Stone who finished the job.

BG had the advantage in shots (22-13) and a 5-3 shots on goal lead.

Matthew Martinka was given his first collegiate start of his career in the loss.

"We did not play well," said Bowling Green head soccer coach Mel Mahler. Mahler refused to comment any further on the Falcon loss.

Ohio State was given the tournament win after dispatching Oakland 4-1 by scoring three goals in the last 15 minutes.

The All-Tournament Team, which was decided by the coaches, was given to Ohio State's Feldhaus, Tomaino, Tony Monroe and Trey Halberder. Golden Bears were Gunner Hlvorsen, Jason Perry and Viggo Anthonsen. Vanderbilt honorees were Seth Gerdiner and Yingling while Bowling Green players Matt Lyons and Fred Degand were also named to the team.

Lee Owens' questionable decision took points off the scoreboard but not a win for Akron.

After Zac Derr kicked a 29-yard field goal to give the Zips a 23-20 lead over Ohio with 1:58 to play, Owens elected to take the three points off the board when the Bobcats (2-2, 0-1) were called for a personal foul for roughing the snapper.

The penalty gave Akron a first and goal at the Ohio 6-yard line. Three running plays took the 0 victory over Holy Cross in 1970. The Bulls returned to I-A last season and went 0-11, 0-8 in the MAC.

"There was a lot of joy and celebration in the locker room," Buffalo coach Craig Cirbus said. "It was time for our kids to win."

Nose tackle Marty Harig returned an interception 29 yards for a touchdown as the defending West champ Broncos (3-1, 1-0) beat Toledo (3-1, 0-1) for just the second time since 1989.

Harig's interception return gave Western a 21-0 lead and keyed a solid defensive effort. Toledo, which averaged more than 30 points and 350 offensive yards in its three victories, managed 312 yards Saturday.

"When you have a defense that swarms somebody and plays as hard as ours does, it is going to work in our favor," said Western coach Gary Darnell. "They really maintained their focus with their backs on the wall. We raised our level at critical points of the game."

Chester Taylor ran for 132 yards and a touchdown for the Rockets.

Miami (3-1, 2-0) jumped on top of Kent State (0-3, 0-1) 35-0 at halftime thanks to Cal Murray's touchdown runs of 5, 4, 48 and 5 yards.

Murray ran for 113 yards on 14 carries and Mike Bath completed 21-of-32 for 261 yards, numbers that didn't sit well with Golden Flashes coach Dean Pees.

"I don't know what team showed up today, but it wasn't Kent State," Pees said. "We've got to go back to the drawing board and get it right. We're a lot better team than we showed. We didn't play with any emotion."

Murray, who didn't play in last Saturday's loss to Ohio State, got in because of starter Steve Little's fumble problems. Once he started to run, Little barely got off the sideline. He finished with 33 yards on seven attempts.

"It has been a rule around here for a long time, don't put the ball on the ground," said RedHawks coach Terry Hoepfner. "Steve will be back. But Cal Murray, wow. He ran hard today. When he gets his opportunity, it's hard to take him out."

clock to 24 seconds and Derr kicked an 18-yard field goal to give the Zips (2-2, 1-1) the 23-20 win.

"We were starting to wear down on defense, so in my gut I thought it was the right thing to do," Owens said. "We tried to get as much time off the clock as possible. When Zac said to take the first down, I felt reassured."

Elsewhere in the Mid-American Conference Saturday, Buffalo got its first win since joining the league last season, 20-17 over Bowling Green; Western Michigan beat Toledo 21-14 in an early Western Division showdown; and Miami University routed Kent State 45-14.

In non-conference action, Auburn defeated Northern Illinois 31-14, Boise State beat Central Michigan 47-10, North Carolina edged Marshall 20-15, and Temple won a shootout with Eastern Michigan 49-40.

Marquis Dwyer's 27-yard touchdown run with 1:27 left lifted Buffalo (1-3, 1-0) over Bowling Green (0-1, 0-4) and gave the Bulls their first win since beating I-AA Canisius in 1998.

It also marked Buffalo's first win against a I-A opponent since a 16-

The Technology Infrastructure Project • Building an Electronic Community

BGsupernet

www.bgsu.edu/bgsupernet

The digging is done

With the completion of the final 200 feet last week, more than four months of intensive trenching and underground installation for the technology infrastructure project came to an end.

The final piece of trenching—under Poe Road to the Technology Annex—finished a puzzle that ultimately included more than 10 miles of trenches and 80 concrete manholes.

Keeping the work on schedule despite setbacks with weather were BGSU personnel and a group of contractors led by Romanoff Electric Corp., the general contractor for the project.

BGsupernet is the biggest project that the Toledo-based contractor has ever done in such a short time frame, said Dave Wozniak, Romanoff's vice president for project management. The company has had as many as 78 workers at the University and continues to do the interior construction (modification of buildings) that will wrap up late this fall.

Probably the most visible of Romanoff's seven subcontractors has been Curry Excavating, which brought 42 additional employees to Bowling Green to dig the trenches and other holes that covered the campus landscape. Business owner Doug Curry called the project "one of the most challenging jobs that's been on the bid list in this part of the country for quite a while."

Restoration of grassy areas affected by the construction has been done with the aid of Bauer Lawn Maintenance, which applied the quick-growing hydroseed that helped restore the appearance of the central campus in time for summer commencement on Aug. 12.

Also among the subcontractors have been three concrete cutting companies: Duffey Concrete Cutting, doing both outside and inside work; Ohio Concrete Sawing and Drilling, and Concrete Cutting and Coring Services, both of which have been inside buildings. Lakeside Interior Contractors has also been on site—doing ceiling, wall, painting and flooring work—as has the only subcontractor not from the Toledo area, Fremont's Warner Mechanical Corp., which has handled plumbing, heating and air conditioning.

Because restoration work is ongoing—as is interior construction and installation of cable—faculty, staff and students should continue to be careful in work areas.

Look for weekly BGsupernet updates in "The BG News." Construction updates are available via the project hotline (2-0500) and on the Web at www.bgsu.edu/bgsupernet. Class relocations necessitated by project work can also be found in "The BG News" and at the Web site, or by calling Campus Fact Line (2-2445).

These Curry Excavating personnel were among the more than 160 workers whom Romanoff Electric Corp. and seven subcontractors combined to put on the job at times this summer.
